

My grandmother just described the campaigning for Bush being planned by Sinclair Broadcasting as "despicable".

At a crucial time when American's need truth and solid factual reporting to make an informed vote; they will be force-fed a film of documented lies about one of our nation's two viable presidential candidates. How is this possible?

Does no one control the public airwaves? How is it that this supposedly great democracy can allow itself to wallow in the gutter like this? It seems that money driven corporations have control of most things and the airwaves. Perhaps the FCC might consider exerting influence in the public interest rather than guided by the corporate hand. I think we American's are at least due this service. We do pay FCC salaries don't we? Do us right FCC.
